What “Color” Are You?

Before you can express yourself well, you need to know yourself. What situations make you nervous or shy? Are you bored with day-to-day life, or do you wake up excited each morning?

Many people learn about what makes them happy or sad by taking online personality¹ tests. One well-known test is the Color Code Personality Test.

During the test, the user answers questions such as “Do you think people are jealous of you because you are happy?” or “Are you afraid of not having a career plan?” Afterwards, the computer program groups the user into one of four colors: red, blue, white, and yellow. People who are “reds” want power², “blues” want romance³, “whites” want peace⁴, and “yellows” want fun⁵.

People might not be proud of the results. They might even make the users a little angry, but most people who take the test are pleased to get an honest⁶ opinion about themselves. Are you interested in this test? Surf the Internet now!
