Home Run Helps End 10-Game Losing Streak¹

A game-winning home run by star pitcher Carlos Rodriguez helped push the Portland Sidekicks to a 2–1 win over the Los Angeles Stars this Friday. The win finally brought an end to the Sidekicks’ 10-game losing streak, which began in late May. Rodriguez’s home run was the high point of the game, earning him the title of Most Valuable Player of the game.

3 Post-reading

I. Reading Skill: Understanding Implicit Meaning of Newspaper Headlines

News headlines can be difficult to understand. Sometimes, this is simply because one does not know enough about the topic being presented. In many cases, however, the problem is that newspaper headlines seem to be written in a secret code with their own vocabulary and grammar. This is because newspaper headlines need to be short, so they often contain incomplete sentences.

In newspaper headlines:

- (1) Articles (the/a/an) and possessive pronouns (his/her/their) are often left out to save space.

Ex. Man Saves Son = A man has saved his son.

- (2) Verb tenses are often changed or simplified.

Ex. Villagers Hurt in Local Riot = Villagers were hurt in a local riot.

- (3) Related pieces of information that appear in the article are often excluded from the headline.

Ex. Typhoon Kills 20 = Typhoon Melda killed 20 people last Wednesday.

- (4) Specialized vocabulary is often used.

Ex. Hawks Upset Tigers 3–0 = Hawks beat Tigers 3–0.

Jenkins Lands Gold Medal = Jenkins wins gold medal.

Test Your Skills

Change the headlines below so that they form complete sentences that provide more detailed information about the article's content. Feel free to add additional information you think the headline should include.

1. England Beats Brazil, Advances to Final

2. O'Leary Upsets Franklin, Captures Heavyweight Title

Create headlines for the following events:

3. A man has won the lottery and given away his winnings.

4. The Blues lost the opening game of the season.
